Salt Water for Sprinkling Streets.

The practice has become quite prevalent at English seaports to use salt water for street sprinkling, and this method and result are pronounced very satisfactory. At Yarmouth, which has a population of about 150,000, the salt water is pumped by a gas-engine, drivingpump of 25,000 gallons daily capacity into a tank at a considerable elevation, whence it is delivered through a special system of distributing pipes nine miles long and three to seven inches diameter; these pipes are of cast iron, coated inside with a special preservative compound. The total consumption annually has been 5,000, 000 gallons for street-watering, at a cost of 5 cents per 1000 gallons, being a considerable saving over the expense of the same work when fresh water was used. The statement also is made that during the summer months the dust is kept under by the adhesive qualities of the salt in the water; and if the surface coating formed by the salt is removed by sweepers at the ap- Government Nursery on King pearance no disadvantageous effects can be traced to the use of salt water. At Birkenhead it is found to obtain 5 gallons of comthat one spread of water on the pound, ready mixed, 1 pint of surface of a street or road proves which added to 11 gallons of equal to about three spreads of fresh water, as the latter evapor- water, will make an effective ates under the heat of the sun, Blight Wash. whereas the crust on the surface left by the salt water keeps down the dust for a considerable length of time. In another locality the one load of salt water goes as far as three of fresh in that place; and in various other towns where this system has once been put to the test, it has been adopted as the one possessing special advantages .-

In Japan occupations pass from father to son. A short time since an announcement in a Japanese newspaper stated that a certain dancing master would hold a service in commemoration of the 1000th anniversary of the ancestor who first adopted that profession.
